The Future of Marriage

by David Blankenhorn author of Fatherless America

Published by Encounter Books
Hardcover. 260 pages
ISBN: 1594030812

In THE FUTURE OF MARRIAGE, David Blankenhorn offers a bold, new argument in the debate over same-sex marriage: that it would essentially deny all children, not just the children of same-sex couples, their birthright to their own mother and father. If we change marriage, we change parenthood — for all families. Altering marriage to accommodate same-sex couples would mean weakening in culture and eliminating in law the idea that children need both their mother and their father.

THE FUTURE OF MARRIAGE offers a grand anthropological tour of marriage through various societies. David Blankenhorn concludes that throughout history and in very different kinds of societies, the main purpose of marriage is to provide every child with his or her father and mother.

THE FUTURE OF MARRIAGE also includes never before released research analyzing data from the International Social Survey Programme in 2002 conducted in 35 countries, which offers the first scientific support showing that marriage is weakest in nations in which support for gay marriage is strongest.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: David Blankenhorn is president of the Institute for American Values, a nonpartisan organization devoted to strengthening families and civil society in the U.S. and the world. A 1998 profile in the New York Times describes Blankenhorn as a “consensus builder for a moral base in society.” USA Today describes Blankenhorn as “leading a grass-roots movement” to strengthen marriage. A profile in the Los Angeles Times called him “the de facto navigator” of a new fatherhood movement and the Idaho Statesman describes Blankenhorn’s 1995 book, Fatherless America, as “the bible of the fatherhood movement.”

“David Blankenhorn enormously deepens the current debate on same-sex marriage by recovering the historical understanding of marriage as a public institution designed to promote and foster procreation and the raising of children, an understanding based not on religious conviction but on observation of how our species has evolved over time. It is a thoughtful and important addition to the contemporary debate.”

— Francis Fukuyama, Bernard L. Schwartz Professor of International Political Economy and director of the International Development Program, Johns Hopkins University

“No one has thought more deeply about marriage as an institution than David Blankenhorn. And no one has ever made the case more powerfully that the future of marriage will determine the future of America’s children and thus the fate of our democratic experiment. This eloquent book connects the dots among seemingly unrelated social and legal developments to produce a picture of society at a crossroads, a society that still has time to revitalize marriage as its most important institution for nurturing and educating each new generation.”

— Mary Ann Glendon, Learned Hand Professor of Law, Harvard University
